EXECUTIVE NOTE

Dear Colleagues,

Coming to DC for the National Conference of Regions next week? We look forward to welcoming you to NARC's new home at 660 North Capitol Street NW, down the hall from the National League of Cities and National Association of Counties. We will host the conference Sunday evening reception right here in our new offices at 6:00 PM, just blocks from the conference hotel. The latest update of the conference agenda can be found HERE.

If you would like to help plan the program for the summer meeting, drop us a note to join the planning committee. Make sure to join us for the Capitol Hill breakfast on Wednesday morning in the Capitol Visitors' Center to hear from lawmakers on what to expect from the 115th Congress. Directions will be available at the hotel for both the Sunday evening reception and Wednesday breakfast.

There is a lot of activity in Washington and we are anxious to share with you our outlook on what to expect from Congress and the Administration. Possible budget cuts to local programs such as transit and housing, the local impacts of tax reform, mandates and preemption of state and local authority, and rollbacks of regulations all have potential implications for your communities and could be on the agenda for lawmakers. We hope you can join us and help us bring the regional perspective to Capitol Hill and the new Administration.

Best,
Leslie Wollack, NARC Executive Director

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

Congress is in session.

Overview

The Trump Administration continues to fill out its Cabinet with the confirmation of Transportation Secretary Elaine Chao last Tuesday. Democrats have slowed the confirmation process for other nominees including Treasury Secretary-designate Steven Mnuchin and Health and Human Services Secretary-designate Tom Price, although Senators were able to vote the nominees out of committee and to the Senate floor. Other nominees continue to move toward confirmation, including Betsy DeVos for education secretary, Rick Perry for energy secretary, and Ryan Zinke for interior secretary. Former Exxon Mobil CEO Rex Tillerson was formally sworn in as secretary of State Wednesday. Not a single Democrat in two Senate committees voted to support Rep. Mick Mulvaney's (R-SC) nomination for director of the Office of Management and Budget on Thursday. While his confirmation by the full Senate appears assured in coming weeks, he will likely lack the bipartisan support often needed to push major spending plans through Congress.

Washington is preparing for the biggest nomination fight to come with President Trump's Supreme Court justice nominee. Federal Judge Neil Gorsuch will need 60 votes to clear a procedural hurdle needed for confirmation. That threshold was removed for lower court nominees and cabinet positions in 2013. With partisan tensions high and a Supreme Court nomination fight about to begin, look for early signs of a breakdown in the appropriations process.

Appropriations Outlook

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) told reporters last week that this year's packed legislative schedule will prevent completion of all twelve spending bills through regular order. Returning to regular order has been a priority for McConnell, who also failed last year to pass all regular spending bills before the end of the fiscal year on October 1. This announcement was no surprise, however, given the lengthy process of confirming cabinet members, a Supreme Court nomination, and a resolution to the current year spending bills. The current continuing resolution expires on April 28.

President Trump is expected to address a joint session of Congress on February 28. Outlines of a fiscal year 2018 spending plan may be included in the discussion. Office of Management and Budget Director Designee Mulvaney has said he hopes to provide a "skinny" budget to Congress in February and a "more detailed budget" in April or early May. A delay in confirmation could interfere with the timetable.

Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America

Last week, the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee held their first full committee hearing of the 115th Congress titled Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America. The committee heard from leaders of FedEx Corporation, Cargill, Inc., BMW of North America, and Vermeer Corporation, as well as the president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO). The witnesses offered ideas about how to pay for an infrastructure package and what types of projects should be included. Several talked about the need for air traffic control reform and spoke in favor of user fees and increasing the gas tax. The panelists were also asked by Michael Capuano (D-MA) about public/private partnerships, a cornerstone of Trump's original plan, to which they all agreed cannot alone solve our infrastructure needs. In Chairman Bill Shuster's (R-PA) opening statement he talked about the focus on infrastructure in this election and the mention of it during the president's inaugural address, but did not offer any details on their infrastructure plans.

NACo is Urging House Members to Sign Municipal Bond Dear Colleague Letter

U.S. Reps. Dutch Ruppersberger (D-MD) and Randy Hultgren (R-IL) are circulating a bipartisan "Dear Colleague" letter to protect tax-exempt municipal bonds in any future tax reform or infrastructure measures. The letter will be sent to House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady (R-TX) and Ranking Member Richard Neal (D-MA). Current cosigners include: Reps. Hultgren, Ruppersberger, Napolitano (D-CA), Messer (R-IN), Brooks (R-AL) and Capuano (D-MA). Visit NACo's County Explorer to download your state municipal bond profile and share this with your members of Congress and their staff. Republican members should have their staff contact David Heitlinger in Rep. Hultgren's office at David.Heitlinger@mail.house.gov, and House Democrats should have staff contact Bill Hulse in Rep. Ruppertsberger's office at Bill.Hulse@mail.house.gov. Municipal finance and the threat to the tax exemption for municipal bonds will be on the agenda in Washington, DC. Don't miss this important session.
