ABOUT THE POSITION
The current Executive Director is retiring after 23 years in the position, and is leaving a well-respected, financially stable, and highly professional organization serving southern Oregon’s Jackson and Josephine counties. RVCOG provides a multitude of varied programs to its 23 member entities and to the region as a whole, including senior and disability services, water quality, transportation and land use planning, GIS and drone services, grant administration, and financial and human resources assistance.

The Executive Director is responsible for ensuring the highest level of professionalism and service to the membership and region through management of the organization’s programs and operations. In the role of RVCOG’s chief operations and administrative officer, the Executive Director maintains responsibility for strategic development, coordination, direction, and execution of the policies and programs of the agency, as well as informing and advising the RVCOG Board on policy issues and executing their directives.

While RVCOG is undeniably an influential presence within the region, it is first and foremost a service organization, with its success tied directly to the quality of its programs and their relevance and responsiveness to the needs of its member jurisdictions and partner agencies. To ensure the continuation of the reputation RVCOG enjoys in the region, the Executive Director must set the tone of the organization by maintaining an up-to-date awareness of the needs of its members and the region, and by determining when and how RVCOG can be most useful in meeting those needs.

THE PERSON
RVCOG’s success has a great deal to do with a relatively flat organizational structure, in which employees at all levels are expected to act as ambassadors for the organization and to contribute to decision-making on an ongoing basis through active collaboration. The Executive Director is expected to embrace this structure by being strategic in delegating responsibilities; open to staff contributions and suggestions; and clear and concise in all communication.

The ideal candidate will be someone who doesn’t insist on making all the decisions, but rather is adept at facilitating effective decision-making from others; is an engaged leader but not a micromanager; anticipates organizational financial needs and collaborates with management staff to address issues and ensure that goals are met; makes furthering the interests of the organization the top priority; demonstrates the highest degree of integrity and ethical conduct; engenders trust and credibility; embraces innovative ideas while also ensuring that they are financially and operationally feasible; is politically savvy but does not aspire to be a political “player”; and is capable of stepping in and taking the lead on a project when appropriate. Key strengths include excellent communication, organizational skills, and problem solving abilities, the capacity to effectively multi-task in a fast-paced environment, and an ability to scrupulously maintain an apolitical posture.

DESIRABLE QUALIFICATIONS
A bachelor’s degree in public administration, business administration, community development, economic development, or a related field. A minimum of 10 years of experience in an organizational leadership position, preferably in the public or non-profit sector and including local government administration, is required. RVCOG would also like to see candidates with a history of successful on-the-ground project implementation, although technical expertise in any of RVCOG’s individual programs is not necessary. A satisfactory equivalent combination of education, training, and experience which demonstrates the knowledge, skills, and abilities required to perform the duties of the job will be considered.
